National Register of Historic Places

The National Register of Historic Places is the official list of archeological and historic places that have been designated for preservation.

The NRHP was established in 1966 by the National Historic Preservation Act. It is maintained by the National Parks Service and it includes:

- National Historic Landmarks
- All historic areas of the NPS
- Properties all over the country that are significant to a particular community, state or nation

There are many benefits of belonging to the national register. These include:

- Possible federal and state grant opportunities and tax benefits
- Care and maintenance information of historic property
- Networking opportunities
- Fire and safety code alternatives
- Assistance from the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation when a Federal agency project may affect historic property.

Marine Corps Recruit Depot San Diego was designated as a National Historic District in 1991. It includes 25 buildings that contribute to the historical significance of the district, including the MCRD Command Museum.
